MR. LIND IN MEXICO

THERE is nothing particularly surprising in the fact that Mr. John Lind, the President's personal representative in Mexico reached his destination without mishap. Indeed, it would have been surprising if anything had happened to him. President Huerla is vociferous in his defiance of the hated Yankees, but he has too much common sense and discretion to invite certain destruction by permitting any indignity to the American envoy.

Mr. Lind may be hooted and leered on the streets; the excitable Mexican press may worke faces at him, in fact he is quite lively to have delive regulaters that he is an tian electic guest. But Huerla will take read ears that no official elight is offered m. He knows of he ought to know. A SUMMER SHOWER

AS AN educational measure it might be a wholesome thing for a few Danver newspaper men to make a trip to the Pikes Per Region in starch of the auful 's mage done by the vain Sunday evening. Yesterday morning glaring headlines in the papers of the Capital city told of a catastrophe which had inflicted a "loss of $100,000" in Colorado Springs and vicinity. Houses had been swept away, bridges destroyed, people rendered homeless, etc., etc. Of course there had been plenty of hairbreadth. escapes, and as usual brave policemen and firemen had courted death in the frenzied flood, bearing women and children to Colorado Springs people who read these efforts of the Denver sob squad at breakfast vesterday morning rubbed their eyes in amazement. Then they went out to search for visible evidences of the disaster, and were even more amazed when none were found. The sun was shining brightly from a cloudless sky, the streets were clean-swept and in good order, and strange to say, every house seemed to be in its place. There was no list of dead or injured, and the 'property loss of:$400,-000" was found to have dwindled to the To the Editor of The Gazette. price of a few washed-out ditch boxes. .

The truth is that we had a fine summer shower, accompanied by an electrical display of such extraordinary grandeur that our summer visitors, who are not used to such things, are now thankful that they had an opportunity of witnessing it. It was one additional attraction which Colorado Springs supplied for their entertainmênt williout extra charge.

Moreover, the storm purified the aliready superlatively pure atmosphere, further reduced a temperature considerably lower than that of any other habitable spot in the country, and added wonderfully to the attractiveness of the lawns and trees, It was just what we needed. It extended eastward only a short distance, but wherever the rain fell it was an unmixed blessing to the farmers, and the only pity is that it did not cover all Eastern Colorado, We really ought to have such "devasts rood, especially in mid-summer, even when they inflict an imaginary loss of $100,000.

COLORADO MARBLE IN THE EAST

THE report that a million-dollar contract has been awarded to the Colorado-Yule Marble Company for supplying the marble for a new office-huilding in New York City is a reminder of the importance of a new-industry which has grown up in this state recently ... A few years ago no marble at all was produced in Calorado but within a short time extensive deposits have been opened of a quality so high that it has easily taken first place in the estimation of builders everywhere. Colorado marble has been used in some of the finest and costllest buildings erected in the east in recent years, and is so highly regarded by the Treasury Department at Washington that it is now being used in the construction of nearly a dozen postoffice buildings in various parts of the country.

The new contract, which is by far the largest yet awarded, calls for the delivery of 1,290,000 square feet of seven-eights. inch slabs, amounting to more than 300 car loads. The marble is to be used in the new Equitable building in New York, and the value of the contract is said to exceed $1,000,000.

It is a commonplace saying, when Colorado's mineral wealth is under discussion, that the surface of the state has scarcely been scratched. And yet there is mo doubt that the statement is absolutely true. Colorado's total production of gold and silver far exceeds that of any other state in the Union, yet the best informed mining men believe that the past output is small compared with the wealth yet to be taken from the ground. The production of coal is increasing so rapidly that it is only a matter of a few years until this state will rank with the greatest fire-producing states in the Union in the value of its out-

Hitherto building stone has been an its n of small importance among Colorado products, but now that marble of the finest quality is bying produced in enormous availities from aparies which apprently are inexpensible another valuable users is yelded to the list.

The abolition of the tipping system would be universally welcomed, eschoially by the trave ing public, but it is extremely doubtful whether the St. Louis venture will be successful, even locally. Not that there is anything Lectorious in the system on the contrary it is a lifernity bad but it is too deeply rooted to be eradicated even by legislation.

If a widespread movement against it had been started thirty or forty years ago it might have been headed off, but nowadays tipping is a recognized national institution. It is a nuisance which nine people out of ten instinctively resent, not so much because of the expense as because of the holdup fashion in which the money is taken away from them. But it is here to stay just the same, and there is nothing to do but pay with the best grace possible.

Now, these sayings are regulaterent of an earlier time when for lack of argument some one suggested that his opponent was a Nazarene. In fact, t is highly probable that the Sermon on the Mount was characterized as "mental drivel" by 1027, and eight years later his father, some priest or Levite of that remote period. The sopard still retains his spots.

We were resomi ended to read the Book of Ruth not as a classic, but as a guide to women in the conduct of life. Now, Ruth was a success as a husband hunter thanks to a managing motherin-law, but as to a suggestion for present day womanly practice heaven defend us!

As to woman's sulfings it is too late to argue about it, and hardly worth any man's time to call a haif to it, unity the men is a Joshus, and I don't believe this one is.

Ponderous Personages MULIAM THE CONSUEROR.

By GEORGE PITCH. Author of "At Bord Old Bisham"

William the Conqueror lived almost nine hundred years ago: so long that his descendants have disappeared and have been forgotten. But William the sonage, and school children speak of because William was the last man who conquered England.

Conquering England has not been a very popular pastine for many centuries. A few rash warriors have tackled the job at various times, but most of them have gone home in ice and the rest under an assumed name. In spite of the vast ill-feeling which has existed against England in many quarters from the Eleventh century in, she has remained persistently and even mulishly unconquered. Today there are eminent monarchs who would give a boatload of $10 bills to William if he would only return for a few minutes and explain how he Collection is Valuable.

"As to the value of my find on that bar in the Old Crow, I cannot do better than quote from the Smithsonian publication No. 2.173 by Mr. James William Gidley, assistant curator of fossil mammais, United States National Mussum.

"This little collection proves to be of more than ordinary interest and importance, since it contains one of the phalanges of a camel. The association of this specimen with isolated foot hones and teeth of elephas primigenius equus and bison, with which it agrees exactly in color and degree of fessilization, pretty definitely determined it as pleistocene in age,

"The specimen itself is insignificant yet its presence in the collection proves beyond question the former exintence of cartels in this far north country. Hitherto, the northern limit of their range in America was not known to extend beyond the Silver take (Christmas lake), Oregon, locality; which place is but little north of the forty-third parallel, sithough camels. W severs: saige species, were very abundant on this continent druing both the plicerne and pielstocene periods.

"The finding of camel remains in the phelatocene depósits of the Alas kan peninsula is not attogether unlooked for, but their-occurrence with in the Arctic Circle, was scarcely to be expected. This verification of their former presence in that region, therefore, is of special interest in that it vantly extends the known grographic distribution of this important group of mammals in America during the plets. to cene, while incidentally it adds proof] parts of the harming our property of many parts of the United States country.
